A national geological survey should hold recognized leadership in geology in the country to which it belongs, and attainment of this proud position must obviously depend upon the quality of its geological personnel. With respect to personnel, at least three conditions may be recognized--first, that in which the ablest geologists in the country are drawn to and remain in service; second, that in which geologists perhaps of a somewhat lower grade as regards scientific promise are attracted to the service for a few years of training and then pass out to positions where the opportunities for research or for increased earnings are greater; and, third, that in which able young men no longer look upon the geological survey as a desirable stepping-stone to a future career. Who can doubt that it is the first condition that raises an organization to preeminence in science and the last that marks opportunities lost or unattained? Those responsible for the success of a geological survey, if they be wise, will watch the trend of the organization with reference to these conditions much as the mariner watches his barometer and, like him, if the indication be threatening, take action to forestall disaster. THE INFLUENCE OF COLD IN STIMULATING THE GEOWTH OF PLANTS.¹ By Frederick V. Covu, le, Botanist, United States Department of Agriculture. With 27 plates.
