A supper of shell-meat (shell-fish seven a penny) 6 grains of red cinders are my jewels. And I have a purple-cheeked lady--(Great cheeks as purple earth of a rare Planet) To-night I will lazily call myself Frances The New and you Bitter-sweet Mary, my Sister. But Death delayed, and life became more and more unbearable. She at last found rooms that she liked--overlooking the river in Cheyne Walk. From there she steadily refused to move. Some change was strongly urged by a doctor brought in by a distracted friend. This doctor held out a long life to Frances; and, as life as she then lived it was intolerable, she at last half consented to go away for a time. The where and when were under consideration; hurry seemed both unnecessary and undesirable. What happened at the end no one can know. The idea...
